

BRIEF CURRICULUM VITAE

RAIKOS NIKOLAOS, MD, BCH, PhD

Professor, School of Medicine, Faculty of Health Sciences,

Aristotle University of Thessaloniki, Greece

Lab. of Forensic Medicine and Toxicology

Address: Lab. of Forensic Medicine and Toxicology, Aristotle University, 54124 Thessaloniki, Greece

Email: raikos@auth.gr

Tel: +302310999213

Raikos Nikolaos is Professor of Forensic Medicine and Toxicology at Aristotle University of Thessaloniki. He holds a degree in Medicine, a bachelor of science in Chemistry and a PhD in Forensic Toxicology from the University of Thessaloniki. He is Forensic Pathologist and Forensic and Clinical Toxicologist. From December 1989 to September 1990, under a grant from the European Community, he worked as a specialist at the research center Joint Research Centre / Environment Institute / Air quality Unit in Ispra, Italy. From 3-12-2011 to 31-05-2012 (6 months), he trained in forensic toxicology at the Institute of Forensic Medicine of University of Bern (Switzerland). His main research interests were situated in the field of Forensic Medicine, Forensic Toxicology and Clinical Toxicology, including drugs of abuse, determination of drugs in non-conventional biological samples (e.g., bones, bone marrow etc.) and TDM (Therapeutic Drug Monitoring). He has co-authored over than 90 publications including articles in international peer reviewed journals and national scientific journals (SCOPUS: h-index= 21, citations=1525). He is member of Greek and international scientific associations and member of the board of the Hellenic Society of Forensic Medicine and Forensic Sciences.