

Apostolos Tsialis is a member of the teaching staff at the Centre for Foreign Language Teaching of the Aristotle University of Thessaloniki, where she teaches English for Specific and Academic Purposes. He has been teaching undergraduate and postgraduate courses in English Medical Terminology at the School of Medicine, Faculty of Health Sciences, AUTh since 1998. He holds a BA degree in English Language and Literature from the Aristotle University of Thessaloniki, and an MA in Theoretical Linguistics from the University of Reading, UK. His research interests focus on the integration of new technologies to the teaching of English for Specific Purposes.